North slope of saddle between Steve Peak & Iron Mtn., Siskiyou Mtns., Rogue River National Forest, Southeastern Josephine County, Ore. The Steve peak Cypress Grove run approximately north and south in a diagonal line of mete-volcanic rock across the lower part of the photograph just this side of the timber, with Iron Mtn. just to the right out of the photograph. It was probably from about here that the late Matt Gorman, famous Portland, Oregon, botanist, made his collection in August 1917. Which 'officially' put a cypress tree as growing in Oregon, 28 Jun. 1939.
- 3030 Noble Fir (Abies nobilis Lindl.)
Here we have your typical NOBLE FIR forest: with its characteristic wind-falls, open park-like setting, and great almost taperless tree trunks. Note the little timber claim cabin made of Noble Fir shakes in the background. It was from just such a Noble Fir - 'Larch' - forest that Larch Mtn., Multnomah County, Oregon, got its name. Orie Hickman, camp watchman, is the man standing in line with the two dead stumps on the right. 1908 or 1909
- 3031 Jeffrey Pine (Pinus jeffreyi Murr.)
South Fly Catcher Spring: Near Red Flat: Pistol River Road. Siskiyou Nat. Forest. Looking east with Snow Camp Mtn. in the distance, 9 Jun. 1948.
- 3032 Blue Blossom (Ceanothus thyrsiflorus Esch.)
Azalea State Park, Brookings, Curry Co., Oregon, 8 Jun. 1948.
- 3033 Narrowleaf Cottonwood (Populus angustifolia)
This is the same (tree and) photograph - only reduced considerably from which Fig. 132, page 314 of Mr. Eliot's book: "Forest Trees of the Pacific Coast" was made. Above photograph was taken just for the fun of it. Long before the writer even knew there was a 'Mr. Eliot.' Note the young sprouts from stumps in the immediate foreground, 31 Aug. 1931.

- 3034 Narrowleaf Cottonwood (Populus angustifolic)
This is the same tree as featured on the opposite page)photograph #1-913 52 8) only taken some 20 years later: taken as near as possible from exactly the same spot as the previous photograph. Note the dead top. Also note the great Red Hawk's next of twigs, etc. Also note how the young sprouts in te previous photograph have now grown into fair sized trees: the two trees on the left, 14 May 1951.
